Chapter 2 by

This is their story. Long ago, there was a war between two kingdoms. One kingdom commanded the power of Light. The other commanded the power of Dark. They were fighting for control of both, but that's not where the story will begin.

Their tale begins in a small village between the two kingdoms. A young man was working in the fields when he caught sight of a fair maiden. She was extremely beautiful; her fiery red hair was blowing behind her as she walked down to the lake. Curious, he stopped working to follow her.

She stopped by the lake's edge and sat down. In her hands was a book. When he approached, he tried to be quiet so as to not alert her of his presence. She opened the book and began reading. He tried to move closer, but his foot landed on a branch, snapping it in half. The girl jumped, slamming her book shut.

When she looked back, she saw the young man and breathed a sigh of relief. "Oh, it's just you." He tilted his head in confusion as he walked over to her. "What are you doing over here by the lake? Shouldn't you be working in the fields?"

He shook his head, sitting down next to her. "I don't believe we've met before," he replied. She blinked before breaking out into a fit of soft giggles.

She looked out at the lake, her emerald green eyes shining. "That's... a nice name." He thanked her and she opened her book, continuing her reading. There was a slightly awkward silence between them, making Joseph nervous.

After a while, he looked over at her and skimmed over the page she was reading. Selena saw him looking and laid the book between them. He blushed and read alongside her.

An hour passed before she gingerly picked her book up. Joseph stood up with her. She began to walk away. "Wait!" he called. She stopped and turned to look at him. "Can... can we meet here again?"

She nodded and walked off, leaving him bewildered by her beauty and elusive personality. Without realizing it, Joseph had fallen in love with Selena Cartman.
